

Orientation for new students

Orientation was held for new students who entered the Marine Environment and Energy Professional Training International Course as international students in April 2013.

The goal of this orientation was for the international students (who had just arrived in Japan) to smoothly begin life at TUMSAT. It included explanations of the classes the international students will take over the next two years and support for writing the various documents that must be submitted after admission.

This orientation was attended by a total of 10 international students: nine Chinese students and one Korean student.

The orientation began with greetings from Graduate School of Marine Science and Technology Dean Akio Okayasu to the new students, welcoming them and expressing expectations towards their future activities. Afterwards, information (such as about classes) was shared by coordinators regarding things to be aware of when enrolled at TUMSAT, and documents were prepared for submission.
